ROMANCE OF A POLISH MAID.

In Horatio, Pa., today, will end the last chapter of a romance which began in an humble cottage in Poland two years ago, which has experienced some of the vicissitudes akin to the woes of fiction's heroes and heroines, and now is closed with a lingering echo of wedding bells as two young people begin to "live happy ever after."

Baltimore was the scene of the next to the last chapter.

On Saturday last the steamship Frankfurt was docked at Locust Point. On board was the usual eager crowd of prospective Americans. In the crowd, more eager, possibly, than any of the rest, was Anna Tcho, a pretty Polish girl from the Province of Silesia.

Her story came out when the inspectors began asking questions. The girl told, through an interpreter, with smiles and blushes mingling about eyes and cheeks, of a courtship in the old country, of a man who had come out to the States to find his fortune and prepare a home and then send for the girl across the sea.

Two years had gone by. One day a letter came from the man—a triumphant letter, signed with a big foreign-looking scrawl, "Michael Sawatzki, Horatio, Pennsylvania." The letter made Silesia province, Poland, too small to hold the girl, and before long, with money that the letter had enclosed, she purchased a through ticket to the Pennsylvania mining town and eventually reached Baltimore.

The romance had worked out nicely until the heroine came into conflict with the United States immigration laws. There is no mention in this volume, and are only creatures of the sections and paragraphs. So the maid from Poland was side-tracked to the immigrant detention house in Locust Point, because she had no funds and would in some probability become a public charge. The girl accepted the delay as a mere incidental on the road to happiness, and showed no alarm that the usual immigration regulations might crush her hopes and send her back to Poland. Without a question or murmur she waited from Tuesday until yesterday, with all the difficulties explained to her and laughed at by her, took a train for Harrisburg, and today will meet her man.

They have many strange chapters of real life come to their attention on the immigrant pier, but none prove so interesting as these romances. The romance of Anna Tcho was particularly interesting because the girl was pretty and sweet and neat.

THE GREAT TEXAS OIL FIRE.

The great oil lake at Beaumont, Tex., was set on fire Monday morning by a spark from a locomotive and is still burning. The oil covered seventy-five acres and the quantity amounted to about half a million barrels. The flames at times leaped to a height of five to six hundred feet, illuminating the country for fifty miles around. The excitement of the people was intense. Ten cars of the Southern Railway and a large boarding house were burned.

The great fire destroyed about 40,000 barrels stored in the lake. Judge R. A. Greer, of Beaumont, member of the Texas Legislature, received a telegram Sunday evening from Mayor D. P. Wheat, of that city, stating that the disastrous fire demonstrates the necessity for the immediate passage of the bill now before the legislature which prohibits owners of oil wells from allowing the fluid to escape and flow over the surrounding country. Mayor Wheat says the fire destroyed all of the oil in the lake; that the iron and wooden tanks in that locality were saved, but a large boarding house and an oil-drilling rig were burned. The wind carried the flames several hundred feet into the air and set fire to inflammable material some distance from the oil lake. He says that the flames spread so fast that a number of people narrowly escaped being burned to death.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a well-known and popular baker, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children and it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by Richard Gibson, druggist.
